WADE HAMPTON IN AUGUSTA.

The Guest of the Men Who Followed Him in War.

A MOST MAGNIFICENT DEMONSTRATION Tendered the Great Horseman of the Confederacy. COLONEL STOVALL'S MEMORIAL SPEECH.

How the Day Was Observed in Georgia and the South.

Augusta, Ga., April 27 .- [Special.]-This has been a great day for Augusta. It was Veterans' Day.

Veterans were here from everywhere battle-scarred veterans, bearing the old, tat tered flags of the confederacy that have been silent witnesses of deeds of gallantry and heroism never equaled by any people in the history of the world.

General Wade Hampton was the hero of the day, but there were other distinguished confederates here: General Joe Wheeler, of Alabama; General M. C. Butler, of South Carolina; General John Bratton, of South Carolina; General H. B. Young, of 3outh Carolina; General Fred Cummings of Georgia; General Johnson Hagood, General Bamberg, of South Carolina; General T. T. Mulford, of Virginia: General William Miller, of Florida; General W. H. Payne, of Virginia; General W. A. Quarles, of Tennessee; General G. M. Sorrel, Genaral M. A. Stovall, General George W. Rains, of Georgia, and hundreds of other listinguished ex-confederate chieftains.

Colonel C. C. Jones. The exercises of the day were opened with a meeting of the Confederate Veterans' As ociation at 10 o'clock, at which Colonel C. C. Jones delivered an address in which he said, speaking of Hampton:

"Honored as we are by the presence of one who, as master of horse of the army of northern Virginia; as governor, senator, southern gentleman and deliverer of his people from the domination of the ignorant, the alien, and the false voter, challenges and receives our highest respect, warmest admiration; and anticipating from him the compliment of an ovation upon the occasion of this happy reunion." Speaking of perpetuating the Confederate Survivors' Association by forming a Veterans' Sons' Association, Colonel Jones

"To our descendants do we naturally and confidently look for the protection of our postnumous reputations. They should be the guardians, as they are the legitimate transmitters, of the aims and principles which we hold dearer than life. Permit me, then, to make this suggestion for your consideration and future action. Let our sons, by virtue of heirship, be admitted as junior members of this association, so that when we pass into the realm of shadows there may be those sprung from our loins and inheriting our sentiments who will regard with pride and cherish with devotion the doctrines, acts and recollections which we deem sacred, and see to it that in the pantheon wherein honest history shall set up the images of the good and the great there shall be room—ample, honorable and prominent-accorded to the statues of Davis, and Lee, and Jackson, and Johnston, and Hampton, and of their noble compatriots who imperiled all in the defense of home, in the cause of truth, in the maintainance o right, in the support of freedom and in the exhibition of every trait appertaining to exalted manhood."

At the conclusion of Colonel Jones's address, he presented to General Hampton a handsome badge from Mrs. N. K. Butler, the wife of a Hampton veteran, painted by her

General Hampton accepted it with pride. and said he would prize it as an heirloom. A gold badge of the association was also pre sented to General Hampton, as a souvenir, on motion of Major P. H. Langdon.

Everybody then adjourned to the exposition grounds. General Hampton was driven out, escorted by the Richmond Hussars, and all along the route he was applauded vigor-ously and enthusiastically. General Hampton was escorted to the stand by an old confederate drum corps attired in uniforms that did service in the war. They marched to the stand playing "The Bonnie Blue Flag," and as General Hampton walked up the steps the band struck up Dixie, and the crowd went wild with applause.

General Wade Hampton.

General Wade Hampton.

General Hampton began by recounting with fervor and deep feeling his last meeting with his soldiers, and how they had all embraced and wiped away his tears—tears which he could not restrain even now when he thought and sonk of the mamorable space. Haloved and spoke of that memorable scene. He loved these men, and not these only, but all the cavalry he had the honor to command.

"I know," he said, "that our good friends of the infantry used to chaff us a good deal.

man with spurs on, but in the great fight at Trevillian Station fought by the cavalry against overwhelming numbers of infantry, there were 719 killed and wounded in Butler's division, and in the Sixth regiment there were lost 132 killed and wounded. [Applause]. And I will say that in the great campaign of Gettysburg, where the desperate fighting was by that invincible infantry of ours, the cavalry corps lost more in killed and wounded than any other division in Lee's army. Now we, the cavalry, did do some fighting, on which I do not intend did do some fighting, on which I do not intend to detain you by telling you what I think of the cavalry. I want to show you what General Lee said. Just after the war General Lee wrote me, and requested that I would give him a correct narrative of the operations of the cavalry corps of the last campaign in Virginia. He was, as you know, about to write a history of the war, and it was a great misfortune to the south that he was not at that time prepared to finish it. In his letter he said that the difference between the sections culminated in blood, but not n treason. Those were his words, and I want every cavalryman and every infantryman. and every man who followed the southern cross, to tell his children and they to tell their children [applause] to the remotest generation that they were neither traitors nor rebels. [Applause and cheers]. You fought for what we believed were our rights. We believed it as conscientiously as any man could believe anything on the face of the earth. We believed that we were fighting for God and our fatherland. [Renewed cheers].

"The man who would not fight ought to be damned. [Applease] damned. [Applause]. Now while I say that we were neither traitors nor rebels, I do not say that we should not recognize our allegiance to the general government. It is only one country that we have now, and it is our date and the duty of every man in duty, and the duty of every man in the south, to try and make that country the field for all freemen for all time to come. [Applause.] I am a loyal citizen, but I maintain that I can at all times express my opinion, whether in northern presence or in southern presence, and never will I say that my dead brothers were traitors to their cause." General Hampton then read a number of his letters to General Lee, and a large number of brief congratulatory telegrams from General Lee. After reading he said: "In looking over my records I find that in the last six months of the war we turned in between 18,000 and 20,000 prisoners. That was doing very wall for an army of 5,000 or 6,000. Wheeler said that he whipped them; but it has been said that the infantry whipped them, and we caught them while they were run-General Hampton then concluded by saying:

"As you know I would rather fight than speak, but I do want to tell you of the last cation I received from Lee, as it was particularly complimentary to the army of northern Virginia. I would say that if I had to go through my privations, my sufferings, and could have foreseen the result of the war, even then I would have been willing to encounter the results. After the war General Lee wrote to me and said: 'You cannot regret as much as I do that you were not present at the final struggle; for had you been present with all your cavalry, the disaster would not have happened. [Ap-plause and cheering.] He did not say: 'I think it would not have happened,' or 'I believe it would not have happened,' but he said, 'The disaster would not have happened.' And every member of that corps should now feel that he has a declaration worth more to him than the decoration of the Legion of Honor or the Iron Cross of Germany. my comrades, I did not expect when I left you in North Carolina ever to see you again, or that in the course of natural events I could have had this pleasure. It is a beautiful but very apt thought in the creed of Swedenbourg, that every soldier fighting for his country and killed in battle is immediately Whether this is so or not, I would fain believe it, and I trust if we are not to meet on earth at rest, and even though we did not fall on the battlefield, we may meet our old comrades who. shoulder to shoulder, gave up their life for this dear southern land of ours. I may not see you again, but I will never forget you, and those who nursed me in my desperate illness tell me that in my dilerium I talked about the men in my old brigade, that I talked of the cavalry, that I planned fights, that I gave orders to Major Rosser to charge, and that I said 'Now, there, boys, it is time for old Hampton to go in.' I say that I may not see you again, my old men, but believe me I will not forget you; that my prayers will go to heaven always for you. God bless you, my old comrades."

When General Hampton concluded, the audience applauded loudly and enthusiastically, while the veterans crowded around and waved the tattered and torn confederate flags over his head. For fully two minutes the crowd of 4.000 or 5,000 yelled enthusiastically.

General M. C. Butler.
General Butler was then called, and made brief but eloquent speech, as did General Joe Wheeler. In his speech General Butler said; "Take all the battles of the French and Indian war, add the war of the revolution and the war of 1812, and add to these the losses in all the Indian wars and the Mexican war, and altogether the loss was less than that in Grant's army from May 6th to May 10th, in the battles known as the Wilderness and Spottsylvania.

The Sensation of the Day. General P. M. B. Young was called on next and his speech was the sensation of the day. He opened by saying:

"We are here today to do honor to this man who, it seems, has not been appreciated as we and the entire south appreciate him. I have nothing to say of our sister state, but I do know that had he been a citizen of Georgia he would have been landed back to the senate for life. [Great cheering and applause.]

"We all know that if the voice of the people box, it would have resounded in thunder tones 'Hampton!' 'Hampton!' I speak warmly be cause this man is not only the property of South Carolina, but of the whole south."

At this the audience yelled and cheered wildly, and an unknown South Carolinian rushed upon the stage and shouted:

"I nominate Hampton for governor in 1892."
At this there was renewed cheering, which continued until the battery on the outside fired a salute. Then the veterans and guests retired to the banquet hall, where a barbecued dinner

To Commemorate the Day. After dinner the military and veterans re-turned to the city to celebrate Memorial Day. A grand procession, consisting of local and visiting veterans and military companies, was formed on Broad street, and marched to the cemetery. The procession consisted of mounted police, Marshal John W. Clarke mounted police, Marshal John W. Clarke and staff, the Post band, the First Georgia battalion, volunteers, Lieutenant Colonel Levy commanding: the Knights of Pythias, Uniformed Rank, Sir Knight T. S. Jones com-manding; the Catholic Knights, Captain

Renle commanding; brass band, veteran drum corps, Survivors' Association and visiting veterans, First Vice President Eve commanding; mounted veterans, Captain W. B. Young commanding; Richmond Hussars, Lieutenant Twiggs, commanding. Next came the confederate generals in carriages.

General Wade Hampton rode with General Wheeler, Colonel C. C. Jones and General M. A. Stovall in the first carriage. Then followed the ladies of the Memorial Association.

As the procession passed the confederat monument on Broad street, which was approriately decorated, the veterans removed their hats, and the soldiers presented arms in respect to those in whose memory the shaft was

Colonel Stovall's Speech. At the cemetery Mr. Pleasant A. Stovall de-livered the oration of the day. It was a magnificent effort, the most eloquent speech heard in Augusta in years, and places Mr. Stovall in the very front rank of eloquent southern orators. Indeed it was the unanimous verdict of those who heard it that Pleasant Stoval omes nearer filling the shoes of the lamented comes nearer filling the shoes of the lamented Grady than any other man in the state.

I do not come to speak to you of war, he said. I shall not sing of arms or heroes. The story of southern heroism glows under the sculptor's art, and is graven in our heart of hearts. All the world recognizes human bravery. Valor is no partisan. Whether it is the picture of Marshal Ney leading the French Chasseurs over the rawine of Ohaine, or whether the spectacle of Somerset beating them back with the British Dragoons, the field of Waterloo is luminous with deeds of court age. It makes no difference from which side we view the panorama of war, it is resplendant. I-matters little who writes the epitaph of these brothers of ours—the whole world echoes the refrain:

How sleep the brave who sink to rest With all their country's wishes blessed.

How sleep the brave who sink to rest
With all their country's wishes blessed.

I want to say something this afternoon of that southern republic. Here critics cross swords and chroniclers may differ. Here history makes a stand and challenges a verdict. Here conflicting witnesses and interests diverse may cloud the record and falsify the conclusion, and here a student and inquirer following the currents and clamors of the hour may be lost in tracing the meeting streams which flow from comming led truth and-inevitable error.

The most portentous prospect to metoday is the possible perversion of history. I do not mean that the south must suffer so far as her heroes and her military provess are concerned. There are maps and official records to determine these points. There is the undisputed fact that, for four years, we sustained a civil war in which 4,000,000 men engaged, and where 500,000 perished in which an unprecedented amount of blood and treasure were expended. This must forever establish the glory of southern hood. Nor am I apprehensive that the merits of our statesmen will be forgotten.
These are so linked with the prestige of this republic that to effice them would be to impair the traditions of all America. But what will history say of the southern people—that great community which, in 1881, occupied 850,000 square miles of this country, from Maryland to Mexico—the fairest, most fertile and the lovellest land that God ever gave to man;" with its 12,000,000 of people, its fourteen sovereign states; annually increasing $500,000,000 in weath—annually sending to the markets of the world $200,000,000 in products?

Is this community to go down to history as a

to the markets of the world $200,000,000 in products?

Is this community to go down to history as a brave, but misguided people, led by hot-heads into fratricidal strife; harboring a barbaric custom for the sake of power and pelf; nursing in the midst of this free republic a slave oligarcity, hostile to all notions of liberty, and repulsive to the civilization of the world? This is the position, we are told, we must occupy. Those of us who read the papers of the north cannot fall to notice the tireless, ing-nious efforts to stigmatize our past with just such an unrighteous verdict. Whence issues the serial of American statesmen but from New England presses, gilded with a shallow partizanship by New England schoolmen? What confronts us as a people; is not so much the prevalence of northern ideas in our present life, as northern setting of our history as a people, and it now us as a people is not so much the prevalence of northern ideas in our present life, as northern, setting of our history as a people, and it now seems that the last act of the great condict, the last act of the rack of reconstruction is to be the distortion of history under the ruthless lines of the conquerors' pen. They tell us that they admire the gallantry of our armies, the boldness and brilliancy of our statesman. "But," they say, "your ideas were wrong; your status intolerable, your system was condemned by God and man." Sometimes these things have an effect upon our own people. Already we hear of timid explanations from persons who ought to know better. Even now we hear good men declare that it was a mistake to try to disrupt the union. The school of apologetics is running over in the south.

Colonel Stovall, in glowing language, described the south of ante-bellum days, saying:

I shall endeavor to recall the unwritten record of ante-bellum days; to regard the southerner, not as a soldier, but as a civilian; as man and maker of history. Let us inquire whether the brave and uncounted thousands who sieep around us were engaged in a sinful struggle to preserve an unhallowed institution; let us find out whether in our lives as men and women we were untrue to the great principles of liberty which Washington in our lives as men and women we were untrue to the great principles of liberty which Washington and Jefferson and Jackson ordained; let us see, whether, having established civil liberty at the battle of Yorktown, we were trying to shoot it to death on the plains of Manassas.

He then spoke of southern home life, of southern leaders, of the southern matrons, of

He then spoke of southern home life, of southern leaders, of the southern matrons, of the latter saying:

We are told that there was a false and hectic idea of chivalry in the south before the war—that our women were beautiful, but indolent and impractical; that they grew up like lilies of the valley, which toll not, neither did they spin." O, that I had the power to picture to you the southern matron on the old-time farm! She was the queen of the honsehold as she moved among her family and dependents—a sunbeam and a blessing. What mystery of the garden or the vineyard was not hers; what recipe for the kitchen or the dairy? As she walked about, with her fair wrists bared, her face-was luminous with intelligence, her body the refinements of active grace and her soft eyes full of knowledge and thuth. She was, as Joel Chandler Harris says, the "commissary of an immense establishment"—she gave out the provisions and parceled out the raiment of the plantation; she administered to the sick and distressed, and when Sabbath, like a benediction, rested over the busy settlement it was her sweet voice which read from the Book of Life to the slaves about her those words of consoliation: "Come unto Me all who travail and are heavy laden and I will give you rest!" Drones, indeed! The southern matron of that time, will be led in that better land to the feet of Christ to receive the reward which is given to those who show mercy "to one of the least of these." Bleesed matron of the southern home, your sons and daughters, emerging from an ordeal of blood and fire, bear testimony to your training and cherish your noble character! The great struggle in the practical life of today, which they are enabled to make against the odds of fortune and of fate, is because of your helpful and glorious example.

In concluding, Colonel Stovall said:

The soldiers graves in the cemetery were beautifully decorated by the ladies. There were hundreds of visiting veterans here. Indeed, this has been the greatest congregation of veterans since the unveiling of the Lee haps, never again be such in the south. General Hampton should be proud of this day.

In Thomasville.

In Thomasville.

Thomasville, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]—Hundreds of Thomasville's citizens turned out this afternoon to do honor to Memorial Day. Business was practically suspended for a few hours during the afternoon, while the most important of the exercises were being held. Solicitor John B. Slater, of Valdosta, was orator of the day, and well did he do credit to himself and the sacred memory of our departed dead. He dwelt not on the wrongs of the old south, but showed rather the triumphs obtained by the new. A beautiful tribute was paid to one of the new south's greatest sons, the late Henry W. Grady. Mr. Slater has been highly complimented on his eloquent effort. The floral decorations were very pretty. All three of Thomasville's military companies—the Guards, Hussars and Cadets—were in line, and citizens in carriages and on foot formed the long procession; and the feature of the occasion was the presence draped on the speakers' stand of two tattered and tom flags of the confederacy. They are little else than rags now, having been riddled by bullets and the elements through years of service, but these old emblems of the dark days are more prized than the brightest ban-

grant.

Macon, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]—Memorial Day dawned beautifully in Macon. The weather was simply ideal. All business was sussended in the city after the dinner hour, and the entire populace assembled at 4 o'clock at Rose Hill cemetery, at the soldiers' lot, to pay kose Hill cemetery, at the soldiers' lot, to pay homage to the confederate dead. A greater crowd never gathered there on a similar occasion. The patriotism of the people of Macon was fully and fitly demonstrated today.

The military companies, under command of Colonel C. M. Wiley, assembled on Second street, and took up the time of march in the following order:

Floyd Rifles, Captain Hardeman.
Macon Volunteers, Captain Wells.
Southern Cadets, Captain Sims.
Macon Light Infantry, Captain Mallory.
Then came the Confederate Survivors' Association, in charge of Major M. R. Rodgers, as Commander C. M. Wiley was in command of the military. Members of the E. S. Jones post of the Grand Army of the Republic, I. D. Crawford, commander, were in line with the Confederate Survivors' Association. having been specially invited by the Survivors' Association.
The Macon Hussars, mounted, closed the procession.

The line of march was by the confederate monument at the intersection of Mulberry and Second streets, which had been decorated with flowers and flags by a specially appointed committee. From the monument the procession, lined on both sides by a dense throng of citizens, en route to the cemetery, proceeded up Mulberry street; then through Spring street to Walnut, and up Walnut to Rose Hill cemetery, where arms were stacked and the command dismissed, pending the performance of the following programme:

ORATION BY CLAUD RETES.

Mr. Claude Estes delivered the cration in behalf of the Ladies' Memorial Association. It was a very besutiful and appropriate address. He took as his text this beautiful and true sentiment:

"A land without ruins is a land without memories; a land without memories; a land without memories is a land without history. A land that wears a laurel crown may be fair to see; but twine a few sad cypress leaves around the homes of any land, and be that land barren, beauty-less and bleak, it becomes lovely in its consecrated coronet of sorrow, and it wins the sympathy of the heart and of history. Crowns of roses fade—crowns of thorns endure. Calvaries and crucifixions take the deepest hold of Ilmanity—the triumphs of might are transient; they pass and are forgotten; the sufferings of right are graven deepest on the chronicles of nations."

CAPTAIN DAVIS'S ORATION.

Hon. W. A. Davis, in behalf of the Confederate Veterans' Association, delivered the following very eloquent and patriotic address in honor of the memory of General Joseph E. Johnston:

Ladies, Fellow Countrymen, and Survivors of the Confederate Veterans: Since the last day

Johnston:
Ladies, Fellow Countrymen, and Survivors of the Confederate Veterans: Since the last day whereupon a grateful people assembled in this sacred spot to do honor to those who died in defense of a people's rights, a great confederate chieftain has answered the mighty muster roll

The surviving veterans in Georgia of the confederate army have deemed it proper that on this day, which has for a quarter of a cenury been consecrated to the memory of the past, appropriate tributes should be paid to the distinguished services of General Joseph E. Johnston. Few men have lived, who like he, could view their own potraits in the written history of their times. Yet fewer men have seen the impartial judgment of the world recognize the wisdom of their generalship, even when it was not crowned with success.

world recognize the wisdom of their generalship, even when it was not crowned with success.

Born on the 20th day of February, 1807, dying on the 21st day of March, 1891, his life embraced nearly a century. His biography would be well nigh a military history of the United States. His talents as a soldier were largely inherited from his father, who was an officer in the revolutionary army, and was thanked at the head of the army for his services in storming Fort Washington. General Johnston was himself distinguished for his personal courage in action. In one engagement in the Seminole war his uniform was pierced with thirty bullets, and at Cheputtepec, in the Mexican war, his hand was the first to place the American flag on the enemy's ramparts.

builets, and at Chepuitepec, in the Mexican war, his hand was the first to place the American flag on the enemy's ramparts.

Distinguished as he was as a soldier, at the opening of the war between the states, his high rank in the confederate army furnished him the theater wherein was best displayed his military talents. He was great alike in victory and in defeat. He was one of the few generals in history who obtained his greatest fame by a retreat. The masterly manner in which he fell back from point to point in front of the numerically superior army of General Sherman, not only without sacrificing any of his soldiers but also without either impairing their confidence in their general or their enthusiasm for their cause, deserves to rank as one of the grandest military maneuvers of the modern times. But great as was his prowess, high his talent and strong his military attainments, these would have proved powerless except for the devotion of a soldiery whose patriotism was unparalleled by the nations of all times.

The affection which confederate soldiers entertain for him is bost evidenced by the fact that on this day throughout the south in every city, town and village, with gracious hearts and affectionate hands, they bring their tributes to his tomb.

For thirty-six years General Johnston was an officer in the army of the United States, but not alone was he distinguished as a soldier. In the council of the nation it was his high province to represent his people frequently, and he was still a public servant when he had reached the age of four geory ears.

content of the nation is was installed provides to represent his people frequently, and he was still a public servant when he had reached the age of four score years.

Slowly borns upon the stream of receding years, the fierce panorama of the civil war is fading from our sight. One by one most of the distinguished officers have bowed their heads and sheathed their swords at the bidding of the invincible conqueror—death. In their tombs, thank God, is buried all the bitterness of fratricidal strife. Lotty as the monuments which rise in commemoration of their achievements and sweet as the flowers which bloom upon their graves, is the martial greatness which they achieved, and the pure patriotism which controlled their actions.

Be it said to the credit of the American people that no nation in history has so soon bridged the bloody chasm of a civil war. A quarter of a century has passed, and the bloodiest war of civil times is coming to be remembered only as the brilliant stage in which Americans obtained glory for themselves, and illustrated the patriotism of both sections of the union. But recently the first faint rumor of approaching war with a foreign power was accompanied by spontaneous offers of confederate veterans to fight for America under the dag of the union. And today on these hallowed grounds the blue have united with the gray to do honor to the memory of our distinguished dead, and with their own hands to bedeck the graves of those who died in defense of southern homes.

It is said that no man is so great but that at his death his place is filled, that the ranks close up, and the world moves on as if he had left no void. Yet it seems that this could not be true of men so great as the hero whose memory we all so deeply revere. The river runs ever onward to the sea, and though to the naked eye it seems the same, yet not a single drop of water which has passed a given point will ever flow by it again. It is so with that vast current of humanity which is flowing ever onward to the infinite ocean of eternity. It is but a superficial glance which conveys the impression that the world is the same when great men leave it. Not a single human thought has ever died. Even if suppressed in utterance, it has left its impression on the eternal destiny of the mind which conceived it, and the soul whose sentiment first stirred the intellect to its areation.

The inflactor of great men lies not in the positions which they have held, not always in the practical influence which they have exerted on the history of their times, but it lies in the thoughts which they have aroused, and in the sentiments which they have inspired in the breasts of their fellow men.

"To be cold and breathless, to feel not, to think not. This is not the end of existence to the men who have breathed their spirits into the institutions of their country, who have stamped their character on the pillows of the age, and who have poured their heart's blood into the channels of public prosperity." The deeds that men do may be forgotten. The influence of the loity sentiment which prompted their execution will live long after the deed itself is forgotten, even as the rippling wave goes on and on forever across the surface of the sea, though the force which set that wave in motion may have long since been spent, or the object from which it began may have long been buried beneath the waters which it agitated.

The battles in which patriotism and heroism have been displayed may be forgotten, the cause for which they were exerted may have been lost, but the influence they had on human tapiration must be as eternal as the immortality of the soul. These shall

""Resist the empire of decay,
When time is o'er and worlds pass away; Cold in the dyst the perished heart may lie,
But that which warmed it once can never die."

GENERAL GORDON IN LAGRANGE. The Atlanta Military Take Part in the

LAGRANGE, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]—This has been the greatest day in LaGrange's

The memorial exercises passed off with an eclat worthy of the name and the cause they commemorated. The day was bright and more inviting, embowered in its deep, dense foliage. All the schools were closed, and hundreds of people bore their floral offerings to the cemetery.

Four heavily loaded trains brought visitors from Woodbury, Thomaston, Greenville, Stinson, Atlanta, Hogansville, West Point, LaFayette, Opelika and many other places. GENERAL GORDON ARRIVES.

General Gordon arrived at 12 o'clock, and was received with the firing of artillery, the shouts of veterans and the music of the Atlanta Zouaves' band. The Gate City was splendidly represented by her Zouaves, Artillery and Governors' Horse Guards. Mrs. Gordon was detained by the serious illness of a grandchild. The procession formed at 2 o'clock, and preceded by the band marched to the soldiers' cemetery. General Gordon rode a magnificent horse, and was escorted by veterans on horse-back. The march was punctuated by the firing of cannon and the cheers of the great crowd. As the procession entered the cemetery, the scene was in the highest degree inspiring, and the enthusiasm of the people knew no bounds.

The exercises were opened with a beautiful prayer by Rev. S. P. Calloway, and in a most eloquent and brilliant speech Dr. F. M. Ridley presented the orator. As the battle-scarred warrior arose to address the multitude, he was cheered to the echo. He was at his best, and spoke burning words of power. He began by extending thanks for the gracious welcome to the home of his early manhood, and for the heavitabilities of this great people. He said that by extending thanks for the gracious welcome to the home of his early manhood, and for the hospitalities of this great people. He said that on this bright day, so full of patriotic suggestions, that he proposed to hold counsel with them in the cause of our common country, and in order to suit the theme to the occasion he had chosen for his subject the high civic virtue called patriotism. He them described patriotism to be far more than devotion to one's native land, or his readiness even to give his life in its detense. Illustrations from history were drawn to show that even tyrants were patriotic in the sense of being ready to defend their country. He laid down the principle that patriotism was as broad as the country, deep as the foundations of its civil government, and high as the lottiest and highest hopes of possibilities. He stated that true patriotism was true philanthropy, holding as the special object of concern the well being of one's fellow-citizens. Our country, he said, was our countrymen, their interests, welfare and liberties. He insisted that it was the duty of our people, as patriots both to the republic and their future, to strengthen the character of the coming generation by stimulating their self-respect, and this was to be done by cultivating a just pride in the past history of their people, and in the great deeds of their ancestry. He paid a thrilling tribute to the south's record, and the grand contributions of persons to the work of upbuilding the nation.

About fifteen ladies, friends of the different companies, went along. The party went to participate in the memorial exercises. At 9 o'clock p. m., the special reached the city.

The members of the different companies speak highly of the royal reception they received at the hands of the Troup Huzzars, the ceived at the hands of the Troup Huzzars, the LaGrange Light Infantry and the citizens generally.

"Never was LaGrange so crowded," said one of the party. "There must have been fully 2,000 people present, and everybody seemed pleased that Atlanta should send so large a military delegation to participate in their memorial exercises."

Thomson, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]—Memorial services were fittingly observed here today. The procession that marched to the cemetery to honor the dead heroes was one of the largest that ever took part in memorial services at this place. The procession formed in front of Rev. A. B. Thrasher's, on Main street, and marched to the Methodist church, where services were held in the following order: the Masons first in line, then members of the fire company, then little children beorder: the Ansons install line, then members of the fire company, then little children bedecked with flowers, etc. Hamilton Phinizy, of Angusta, was the orator, and his address is pronounced as one of the most appropriate ever delivered at this place on similar occasions. Quite a sum has been raised by the ladies of the Memorial Association for the pursess of executing a monument to our fallen here. pose of erecting a monument to our fallen he-roes, which will be erected by next Memorial Day.

The Day in Elberton.

The Day in Elberton.

ELBERTON, April 27.—[Special.]—Memorial Day was duly celebrated by the Ladies' Memorial Society of Elberton. In the morning services were held at the Methodist church, cenducted by the Rev. Dr. Hoyt, of the Prespyterian church, assisted by Revs. A. C. Thomas, Methodist, and J. J. Farmer, Baptist. The audience was very large, and Dr. Hoyt preached a powerful sermon in the nature of a eulogy on the confederate soldiers and women of the south. The choir furnished beautiful music, appropriate to the occasion. In the afternoon the whole town went out to the cemetery, where the soldiers' graves were strewn with flowers. The Elbert Light Infantry was out in full uniform, and fired a salute over the soldiers' graves.

In Columbus.

Colulbus, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]—Memorial Day was celebrated in Columbus this afternoon with great impressiveness. The weather was charming and business throughout the entire city was suspended. The exercises at the opera house attracted the largest addience ever gathered in the building. A splendid programme, enchanting musical performance and the recitation by Miss Banks of "The Georgia Volunteers," preceded the oration, which was delivered by Captain W. E. Wooten, of Albany, and was a masterly effort. The stage was elaborately decorated with flowers, and the display of bunting and flags was profuse. The Cadets from the Agricultural and Military college, at Auburn, Ala., and the Auburn Guards arrived in the moraing and participated in the parade with the Columbus Guards. After the graves had been decorated the military fired a salute.

rated the military fired a salute.

In Griffin.

Griffin, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]—Memorial services were held this afternoon. The graves of the dead soldiers, all marked by marble headstones, had been nicely cleaned and decorated with flowers. The exercises were very interesting, and the crowd in attendance unusually large. After song by the choir and prayer by Rev. Mr. Woolbridge, Mr. William Hanleiter introduced the orator, General C. A. Evans, of Atlanta. It was peculiarly fitting that General Evans should deliver the address. Having led those bravemen to battle, he could appreciate and tell of their courage and valor, having been a leader of the confederacy, he could expound to the living its doctrines with burning eloquence. He told how these peaceful hills and lovely valleys had been the scenes of great and bloody battles, of the ruin and destruction of Atlanta, of Sherman's mach to the sea, and how the advance of the enemy was contested and checked by the imperial Joseph E. Johnston and his brave soldiers. He said that the reason usually given for this war was the secession of the southern states. This was not the real cause of the conflict. If secession was followed by war, there was something that caused secession. The abstract right of secession could have been settled by eminent and honest jurists. The real issue was, shall there be a sectional administration of the general government? May the union be used for the benefit of one section to the hurd of other sections, or for the advantage of one class to the detriment of any other class? All questions, slavery, tariff revenue, etc., were but incidents were given to show the south's devotion to the union. One question settled by the war was that secession shall be no more adopted by the states. General Evans closed his address with a beautiful tribute to the confederate dead.

Everything Had Been Arranged for His Wedding.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 27.-[Special.]-M. O. Merideth, a young man quite well known in the city, and prominent in business circles, committed suicide this afternoon by blowing out his brains with a pistol. The suicide has created a most profound sensation, which is increased by the fact that he was engaged to be married Wednesday night to Miss Lucy Hudiburg, the beautiful young daughter of Postmaster Hudiburg. So far it seems very difficult to get at the facts, which sused him to commit the rash deed. Scores of rumors are afloat. It does seem to be true, however, that financial troubles led to it.

Merideth has been the local agent for the New South Building and Loan Association, of Middlesborough, Ky. Charges are made that he is a defaulter to the company, and others again that he has collected dues from many stockholders and not turned them over to the company. He came here some three or four years since and seemed to be a poor but hard working man. He professed religion and joined the Church street Methodist church, and has been one of the most prominent and active workers in the church. He took the lead in church work, prayed in public and was a most zealous Christian seemingly. He courted the daughter of Postmaster Hudburg and won her hand. The cards were all out for the marriage, and it was looked forward to as a coming social event.

This morning Meredith was up early. He took an electric car about 7 or 8 o'clock and went to a suburb about three miles east of the city. Some time before hoon he returned, and visited his affianced. It now developed that he insisted strenuously on her taking a buggy ride with him. She told him she could not go, as she was too busy previner for the wedding. He continued for the New South Building and Loan Ass not go, as she was too busy pre-paring for the wedding. He continued to insist, and was with difficulty put off. He left the house and about noon was seen going in the direction of the historic old Fort Saunof the direction of the instoric old Fort Saunders. Several persons saw and recognized him.

Just after dinner he was seen near the old fort, sitting under a tree reading a letter. As far as known this was the last time he was seen alive. Between 1 and 2 o'clock some one was passing the fort, and was startled by the report of a pistol. The party looked, and saw a man under a tree, with a pistol at his head, fall. The alarm was given and assistance rendered.

The man was found with a bullet hole through his head, from which his hrains and blood cozed. The pistol was still in his hand, but he was dead. He had evidently deliberately planned his own death. He had taken off his coat and selected a beautiful spot under the pines, which skirt the memorable battlefield of Fort Saunders. He had fallen with his head on his coat.

About ten days since Meredith was reported to have fallen from a Knoxville, Cumberland Gap and Louisville train and hurt himself. It is now said that he jumped from the train with the intention of killing himself, but that he falled to do so. This story may be false. But he did jump or fall from a train. By his body today was found a letter addressed to his affianced. The contents of this letter have not yet become public, and may not. It have not yet become public, and may not. It is said, however, that in this letter he states that he had been bounded by parties into the deed. This story puts gossip going again. The statement is that the parties he referred to have had some dealings with him in the build-ity and loop association and had threatened ing and loan association, and had threatene him with criminal prosecution. The affair is in deeper mystery as the statements come out but the facts will doubtless be developed.

THAT DENVER POISONING.

How It Was Ascertained That the Bottle Was Mailed at Boston.

DENVER, Col., April 27.—The death, by poisoning, of Mrs. Josephine Barnaby, of Providence, R. I., is the sensation of the hour. The analysis of the portion of the liquid re maining in the bottle that came by mail from Boston, purporting to contain fine old whisky, shows that there was no whisky in it, nor any other kind of alcohol. It was an arsenical sol tion, colored and perfumed. The discovery that it was mailed in Boston was made through the

MRS. MARTIN'S TRIAL

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 27 .- [Special.]-From all appearance the famous Martin mur-der trial will go down with tomorrow's setting Only two arguments are yet to be made, and the jury, it is safe to say, will not be out over an hour before they return with a verdict for the acquittal of the defendant, who, judging from the protestations from all sides, is now regarded as the child of the people.

Soon after the trial started this morning a huge and beautiful basket of flowers was car ried into the courtroom and presented to Mrs.

affected. Dangling to the handle was a white card on which was written the words, "From five sympathizers," while a general hum of approval passed through the courtroom from the vast crowd in sanction of the beautiful

The tilt long looked for and prophesied by your correspondent some time ago, took place this morning, in which the lie was passed, and except for timely interference, a personal encounter would undoubtedly have been the result. Attorney John, for the defendant, while pleading, made a disparaging remark at Colonel Baker, for the state, who immediately sprang to his feet and exclaimed: "You are a liar and a ruffian." Before any further action was taken, however, friendly lawyers used the proverbial oil, and things quieted down. The afternoon session, which was opened by Attorney Meade for the defense, was brought to an unexpected close by Mr. Meade taking suddenly sick, and the court adjourned until tomorrow morning. There is but one more speech to follow his, and then the great case will have become a memory only. The tilt long looked for and prophesied by

THE LOTTERY CASES, | PAYING OFF ELECTION DEBTS. Men Given Wheelbarrow Rides in

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 27 .- [Special.]-Election bets are being paid now, and it is supposed that several thousands changed hands today, the results of lucky guesses as to the winner in the mayoralty contest. Two of F. B. Fisk and John P. O'Conner, wagered a wheelbarrow ride down Commerce street, loser to officiate between the handles while the victor occupied the seat in the barrow. This wager was settled at 10 o'clock this morning, Mr. Fisk furnishing the motive power while O'Conner enjoyed the airing, because his favorite Crommelin won the mayoralty. A barrow ride along Dexter avenue was enjoyed by Ed Hogan, one of Crommelin's active workers, James J. Sullivan, one of Colonel Reese's lieutenants, furnishing the muscle power necessary to propel the vehicle. These two wagers fur-nished fun for thousands who lined the streets along which the parades moved, and the unfortunates took the guying of the crowds as good-naturedly as possible A CARD FROM COLONEL REESE.

Union Springs Can Now Engage in the

Montgomery, Ala., April 27.—[Special.]—Some time since Morris Cowart was arrested in Union Springs for violating the ordinance prohibiting the sale of liquor in that city. He was convicted and imprisoned, but demanded his release on a writ of habeas corpus, alleging that the law under which he was convicted was unconstitutional on four grounds. The chancellor who heard his application for habeas corpus denied it, upon which he appealed to the supreme court. Today Judge McClellan of that body, handed down a decision sustaining the constitutionality of the law on the first three grounds cited by appellant, and declaring it unconstitutional on the fourth and last ground, which was that the act of the legislaound, which was that the act of the ground, which was that the act of the legisla-ture under which he was arrested and impris-ioned did not set out in its title the contents of the body of the act, as required by the constitu-tion. The court ordered Cowart's release, and the effect of the deciron is to open Union

Meets With a Terrible and Probably Fata Accident. Jonesboro, Ga., April 27.-[Special.]-Miss Inez Speer, a young lady whose home is near Lovejoy station, this county, was found beside the track of the Central railroad near that staconscious condition and frightfully bruised about the head and shoulders. Upon being found, she was conveyed to the on, and a physician dispatched for. Dr. J. A. McKown, of this city, who responded reports that the skull of the young lady i fractured, and from the nature of the wound it was made by the pilot of an engine striking her. This announcement served to quell ar excitement which was brewing, under the sup position that an outrage had been committed and the victim placed on the track to cover the crime. The young lady had left her home but a short while before, to visit a neighbor's se across the railroad, and it is suppose she fell down the embankment of the cut to the track, and being stunned by the fall, re mained on the track until a passing train struck her. As she is still unconscious, it is impossible to gain any true account of the acci-dent. The physicians say there is only a bare possibility of her recovery.

Are Wanted in Texas.

Are Wanted in Texas.

Americus, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]—There is a fortune awaiting W. H. Stern, or his legal heirs, in Meridian, Tex. Some time ago Ordinary Speer received a communication from Meridian asking for information of Stern or his representatives. Messrs. Carruth & Ester, attorneys, at Meridian, say in their letter:

Samuel Calhoun came to Texas from some county in Alabama, at an early day. His daughter, Mary, married one Paul Mersfelder, in Walker county, Texas, about the year 1848.

Mersfelder died in 1851, and the next year after his death, she married Cyrus Perry, who also died within a few months after their marriage. Some time after Perry's death, Mrs. Mary Perry, formerly Mrs. Mary Mersfelder, formerly Mary Calhoun, went to Georgia, where she married one W. H. Stern or Sterns, who is said to have been a widower with several children, and who came with her to Texas, where they soon separated, and he, Sterns, is manored to have returned to Georgia and has children, and who came with her to Texas, where they soon separated, and he, Sterns, is supposed to have returned to Georgia, and has not since been heard from in this country. Mrs. Sterns died about the year 1855. For his interest here, to benefit either him or ourselves, it is necessary for us to hear from him or his heirs at an early date.

There may be a big fortune at stake. The above inquiry suggests a fortune, and if there is a member of the Sterns family in Georgia, he or she should hasten to make good their claim.

Each head works independently of the other. If meat be placed before the creature both heads proceed to devour it, the two mouths taking food at one and the same time. All of the gills are in good working order. The little piscatorial rarity seems as lively and healthy as any of his single-headed brethren.

Hunnicutt & Bellingrath.

I commenced in the real estate, renting and collection of accounts, in this city, in September, 1885, and continued in it until the fail of 1887, when the Coal Creek coal mines were opened in East Tennessee; then, through the kindness of Major Campbell Wallace, who had the first coal from these mines shipped to me, I soon found that there was more demand for coal than land, in this city, and I commenced in that business. It is my intention, about the 1st of May, to return to the real estate business again, trusting that my old friends and the citizens of Atlanta will give me a share of their patronage, piedging them that I will use my best endeavors to serve them faithfully. Respectfully, EDWARD PARSONS. Dated 24 South Broad street, Atlanta, Ga. 1866--CHAMBERLIN, JOHNSON & CO.--1891

DRY GOODS, CARPETS, FURNITURE AND SHOES.

The period of the world's history through which we are now passing may fitly be termed the age of competition. In the commercial world it seems that every man's hand is against his neighbor's. We are brought face to face with a fierce struggle in many cases for existence. No firm can escape the biding law of modern commerce. They will have to put their best foot forward to keep their old customers and make new ones. The only legitimate way for any firm to do this is to cultivate confidence between the customer and itself This can only be done by treating customers fairly and looking honestly after their interests. This course we adopted twenty-six year ago, and which we shall and will follow as long as we are in the trade We handle only such goods as we can honestly recommend. We take no chances on shoddies or auction goods. We invite all kinds of competition. We feel pleasant to all and certainly we can afford to do so as our trade is growing continuously larger and larger. This season larger than last, and so on, as it has been from the beginning. Colonel Clements, in response to a question, said that the work of secur-ing the land was progressing; that he had already secured some 1,300 or 1,400 acres. There were a number of owners away, a good many being in Tennessee. The largest tracts are owned by the Clark, Gordon and Dyer family and Brotherton brothers, perhaps 500 acres

Colonel Clements said that when he had completed this work he would then begin the practice of law in Rome, his family remaining in Louisville,

IT MAY BE A FORTUNE.

The Heirs of a Man Whose Name is Stern Are Wanted in Texas.

Are Wanted in Texas.

Americus, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]—There is a fortune awaiting W. H. Stern, or his legal heirs, in Meridian, Tex. Some time ago Ordinary Speer received a communication from Meridian asking for information of Stern or his representatives. Messrs. Carruth & Estes, attorneys, at Meridian, say in their letter:

Samuel Calhoun came to Texas from some county in Alabama, at an early day. His daughter, Mary, married one Paul Mersfelder, in Walker county, Texas, about the year 1848. Mersfelder died in 1851, and the next year after his death, she married Cyrus Perry, who also died within a lew months after their marriage. Some time after Perry's death, Mrs. Mary Perry, formerly Mrs. Mary Mersfelder, formerly Mary Calhoun, went to Georgia, where she married one W. H. Stern or Sterns, who is said to have been a widower with several said to have been a widower with several children, and who came with her to Texas, where they soon separated, and he, Sterns, is supposed to have returned to Georgia, and has not since been heard from in this country.

Mrs. Sterns died about the year 1855. For his interest here, to benefit either him or ourselves, it is necessary for us to hear from him or his heirs at an early date.

A Strange Fish.

Minsville, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]— Daniel W. Adams, a deaf mute, went fishing at Notchaway creek, one mile from Barnett's at Notchaway creek, one mile from Barnett's mills, and caught a strange fish. It was an eight-pound trout, with two heads, two sets of gills, four eyes, two mouths, and but one body. The heads unite just back of the gills. Each head works independently of the other. If meat be placed before the creature both heads proceed to devour it, the two mouths taking food at one and the same time. All of the gills are in good working order. The little piscatorial rarity seems as lively and healthy as any of his single-headed brethren.

NEWNAN, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]—It is stated on the authority of the husband of the late Mrs. Isham Wheeler, the cotton factory operative who died suddenly a week ago, that he was a daughter of ex-Governor Smith, of Alabama. Superintendent Florence says she was a woman of more than ordinary intelligence, but so far as known gave no intimation of her relationship to Alabama's ex-governor during her residence here.

DRY GOODS, CARPETS, FURNITURE AND SHOES.

The period of the world's history through which we are now passing may fitly be termed the age of competition. In the commercial world it seems that every man's hand is against his neighbor's. We are brought face to face with a fierce struggle in many cases for existence. No firm can escape the biding law of modern commerce. They will have to put their best foot forward to keep their old customers and make new ones. The only legitimate way for any firm to do this is to cultivate confidence between the customer and itself This can only be done by treating customers fairly and looking honestly after their interests. This course we adopted twenty-six year ago, and which we shall and will follow as long as we are in the trade We handle only such goods as we can honestly recommend. Mr. Atkinson on Free Silver.

In the current number of The Forum, Mr. Edward Atkinson has a little article headed "Free Silver. Why Not?" For some rea son or other, known only to himself, the editor of the magazine employs the article as a tail piece, and it seems to figure as the financial snapper to a literary whip.

Our readers ought to be familiar with Mr. Atkinson's methods. They no doubt remember the celebrated discussion on the negro question to which he invited THE CONSTITUTION. He undertook to solve and settle the negro problem in a series of articles, but threw up the self-imposed engagement without going very far into the matter. We have never been able to find out whether Mr. Atkinson in this instance bit off more than he could chew, or whether he deserted this particular discussion in order to acquit himself in another and a more important one.

It was natural that Mr. Atkinson, as professor of matters in general, and a doctor of political economy in particular, should have views on the silver question. It is the trouble with all Mr. Atkinson's pieces that they are whimsical rather than argumentative, and the tall piece to The Forum is no exception. He says that there would be no objection to the free coinage of silver, if the legal tender act were amended so as to compel debtors to pay their obligations in gold. There is nothing new in this except the boldness with which Mr. Atkinson announces the desire and purpose of the money mopolists and the goldbugs. None of the subsidized organs of the money power have ever gone so far as to say, as Mr. Atkinson says, that debts should be contracted at silver valuation. The whole theory and purpose of monometallism are here uncovered and exposed to view. As Mr. Atkinson truly says, there would be no objection to free coinage on the part of the goldbugs if the legal tender act could be amended so that gold would still be exalted above silver and be made the debt-paying money.

The people who are in favor of free coinor the other of the money metals. They desire to restore silver to its old place in the law and in the currency from which it was stricken by republican trickery. They want the money of the constitution, gold and silver. The whimsical chatter of Mr. Atkinson on silver is not of the least importance in the settlement of this great question, but he is really a man of some intellectual vigor, and the fact that he is entirely blind to the real merits of the issue is somewhat signifi-

There is no end to the theories which the monometallists and their strikers are able to evolve out of a deplorable situation which they themselves are responsible for, and with the aid of fluent men like Mr. Atkinson there ought to be no lack of plausible theories. A theory, however, is no argument, and this is a fact which even the simple-minded may readily comprehend. When the Bland bill was pending, the argument was that the coinage of even $2,000,000 a month would destroy the financial order and drive gold out of the country. The bill became a law, and the coinage of silver dollars has continued up to the present time. The monometallists have been compelled to admit that they were wrong. They now say that the free coinage of silver will drive all the gold out of the country, and this predichas no basis whatever except a desire on the part of the goldbugs to frighten the people. From the foundation of the government to 1873 there was free coinage of silver, and gold was not run out of the country. A part of the time silver was worth proportionately more than gold, but with the two metals on an equality before the law the differences adjusted themselves promptly and effectually.

The future can only be judged by the past. The financial condition of the people was never better than when silver was a money metal. Their financial condition since the demonetization of silver has been deplorable.

McKinleyism and Murder.

The Pennsylvania coke riots show how McKinleyism works.

A big corporation joins other monopolists in securing the passage of a law which protects their industries, but permits free trade in labor. Then cheap foreigners are imported to drive off intelligent American These foreigners are compelled to live in the corporation's cabins, and are paid in orders on the corporation's swindling stores. Unable to stand such serfdom they resort to the only remedy they can think of, and are evicted and shot down when they

Now, what causes all this trouble? Not the American workingman, not the cheap chines, and machine products, and raw material, but does not protect the human beings whose labor is a necessary factor of our protected industry.

Starvation, riots, murder-these are some of the results of McKinleyism and the oppressive financial system which is its twin

Until we have tariff and financial reform the peace, as well as the prosperity of the country will be threatened day and night.

What People Read.

The announcement that "M. Quad" has given up a position at $100 a week on The Detroit Free Press to go on The New York World at a salary of $200 dollars a week, is significant and suggestive.

It shows that the popular demand of the age is for entertaining rather than instructive reading matter. The majority of the writers of scholarly and instructive books and newspaper matter are very moderately paid. They are infinitely superior in intellect and education to the men who turn out humorous, pathetic and sensational sketches and stories, but the latter find a ready market for all their work, and command their

The other day a famous actress said that tragedy is not appreciated these days because people would rather laugh than think. So with newspaper readers. They do not want anything that will strain their intelects. The hard struggles and problems of life weigh so heavily upon their minds that when they read anything they demand amusement or entertainment.

It is all right. The deep thinkers whose works do not pay the expense of publication in their lifetime, and whose services on a newspaper are poorly compensated, have no cause to kick when a light sketch writer gets nearly ten times their reward. If they choose to carry unsalable goods to market it is their fault, and they must take what they can get. After all, the people are the judges of what they want, and it is natural that newspapers should supply it and pay well the writers who know how to entertain the public

The World has done a better thing for itself in engaging "M. Quad" than if it had engaged the most eminent scholar, scientist, statesman or specialist of the day.

Very Zealous Reformers.

In certain quarters there is, just at present strong disposition to make it exceedingly uncomfortable for heretics. Perhaps this is not to be regretted, but there should be a decent and orderly way of proceeding in such cases. The church authorities are the proper parties to take action in the matter of heresy. It is an offense that the public in general ha nothing to do with, and there is nothing in it to justify a resort to mob law. But in some localities the people have very crude notions concerning their rights and duties in the premises. Near Circleville, O., a young man was recently cut almost to pieces by several persons whose excuse was that their victim was a rank unbeliever, and had with his heresies tried to corrupt the minds of orthodox young ladies. In the highlands of West Virginia, a short time ago, a similar case occurred. The Rev. A. R. Cunningham organized a band of twenty stalwart religionists who attempted to make the county moral by driving out obnoxious characters. These reformers waged war against not only drunkards, bad debtors and idlers, but skeptics and Sabbath breakers. They notified the offenders to leave the county within twenty-four hours, and enforced their demands by destroying as many as eight houses within a circuit of five miles Such vigorous methods are probably very effective, but they do not suit a country of law and order. When reformers act as res, jurors and executioners they ar carrying their zeal a little too far. In fact, it is not too much to say that a few mild heretics scattered here and there are dangerous to the cause of public morals than these irresponsible reformers who think that the way to make the world better is to club every sinner in sight. It is to be hoped that the Ohio and West Virginia crusade will not spread beyond those two states. The Missouri Investigation.

The probability is that the free coinage democrats of Missouri, who sent an ambassador to New York the other day to get the real views of Mr. Cleveland on the silver question, are in a more muddled condition now than they were before, and they have certainly been the means of befuddling the public. The very fact that they sent on an ambassador to have an interview with the ex-president is calculated, as we pointed out the other day, to create the impression that they had some reason for believing that his deliberate utterances against the free coinage of silver do not represent his real views The public is to be pardoned if this myste rious performance leaves it in a befuddled condition. It is fair to say, however, that the Missouri statesmen are not much better off now. so far as information and illumination are concerned, than they were before. Their ambassador made the journey, had an interview with Mr. Cleveland, and is by this time safe in the bosom of his democratic family, so to speak. But what did Mr. Cleveland say to him? To what extent did the ex-president modify his anti-silver views? The ambassador thought he knew, but, as it turns out, he is mistaken. What he thought he knew is exactly equal to what he doesn't know. He made his report, when it was fresh in his mind, to a newspaper man in New York, and it was promptly published. Mr. Cleveland, however, did not like the report, and he promptly repudiated it. He expressed his surprise that the ambassador from Missouri should give out such a report. "Some things were put in my mouth," says Mr. Cleveland. "Inferences seem to be drawn which are cer tainly unjustifiable." Just what was put in his mouth, or what inferences were unjustifiably drawn, the expresident would not say. He had neither the leisure nor the inclination to go over the ambassador's report and make specific and detailed corrections, and there the matter stands. The ambassador says the newspaper man misrepresented him; the newspaper man says this could not be true, for he wrot out the report at the request of the ambas

Under these circumstances it is natural that the free coinage democrats of Missouri should be muddled. The ambassador has his theory, and other people may have th But the interesting question is, Where foreigners, but the oppressive methods of the coke barons, made possible by the vicious bytem of McKinleyism, which protects ma-

Editor McCullagh has very little patience with Jones and his side-whiskers, and his time is too valuable to monkey with such small game. The cartoon is a perfect gem of pictoria art, with one exception-it does not do justice to Jones's side-whiskers. In other respects the picture is evidently a faithful and life-like reproduction of a lively cowhiding scene. The artist has portrayed Jones in the attitude of helplessly writhing under the well-aimed blows of a whip in the hand of a handsome young fellow who evidently knew what he was about.

We have intimated that the cartoon does not make Jones's side-whiskers show up properly. This is a great drawback, and naterially lessens the value of what would otherwise be a striking historical picture. With this exception, however, the cartoon is a remarkably good one, and will doubt less find a place in many a scrapbook, and on the walls of numerous newspaper sanc

THE OBSERVANCE of last Sunday as Memoria It has been remarked that it was the first tu memorial exercises ever took place here on Sun-day. This is a mistake. Two or three years after the war the occasion came on Sunday, and the whole city massed itself at Oakland decorated the graves of the dead confederates. No objection was raised to this solemn and beautiful tribute, and it never entered the heads of the people that there was anything wrong in devoting a few hours of the Sabbath afternoon to such a work. The fact is, people conduct funerals and visit the graves of the dead every Sunday, and until this custom is abolished it is idle to protest against the decorous observance of Memorial Day when it falls on Sunday.

A DIME IN THE SLOT

THEN THE TELEPHONE WILL CALL THE DEPARTMENT.

The Sunday Morning Fire Could Have Bee Stopped if the Department Had Known It in Time.

The want of a dime!

And the almost fatal burning of Mr. Cal

Fire alarms, however, outside of the bo districts, are given time and time again by tel-ephone, and thereby much loss of property has en averted.

There was a telephone near the Sunday But it was not used.

The Bell Telephone Company has a system of toll stations. There are about a dozen, may be less, of these, in the city.

These toll stations have a slot-box near by, and can be used by any one who has a dime. Any one wishing to use the toll telephone must notify the party in charge; then, after dropping a dime in the slot, turn a crank which rings a bell in the central office. The tap of the bell in the central office attracts the same attention and demands the same recognition as any call in the city.

One of the toll stations-it is numbered 231-is planted in a store near the corner of the Boulevard and Fair street.

The 'phone, 1231, has been as profitable to the company as any in the city. Sunday morning, when the factory opera tives found their cottages on fire their first thoughts went to Chief Joyner and his fire brigade. One of them ran to the store and pulling one of the partners from his bed, reamed out: "Telephone the fire department quick. The row is on fire."

"Drop the dime in the slot then," answered the merchant, "and I'll do it." The man dived towards his vest pocket with his thumb and front finger.

But he couldn't find the pocket. In his great haste he had forgotten his vest With a faint smile-he probably knew the merchant-he said: "I left my vest at home. I ain't got no dime with me." "Then you don't get any call for the fire de partment." said the storekeeper.

"My God, man, ring that telephone. The whole row'll burn up."
"Can't do it. The rules of the telephone company say drop the dime in the slot and the telephone'll talk. I can't break the rules." "Then lend me a dime, and I'll go home and get it and pay you back." Ain't got no

In the meantime the fire was gaining headway.

The people were turning out, and one after another asked for the fire alarm to be sent in by telephone.

But none of them had the requisite dime. And the slot would not work without the dime.

The fire had full sway, and when the department got there four houses had been de stroyed.

The story of the telephone slot's hunger for sched Chief Joyner yesterday, and he began an investigation.

The result did not make the chief smile, and he called upon Mr. Gentry to see if he could borrow a grin.

Mr. Gentry wore a smile as Chief Joyner entered the door, but that smile faded when the chief sold his story. Mr. Gentry then made a morough investigation of the case, and during the day called upon Chief Joyner, ATLANTA, G..., April 27.—Editor Constitution: Your special from Eufaula, published in this mornings paper, describing Colonel H. J. My father and Mr. Edge were neighbors, and the two families were very friendly and often exchanged visits. Mr. Edge was a wheelright, exchanged visits. Mr. Edge was a wheelright, and was very skillful. I often saw the machine by which he believed he had developed perpetual motion with unlimited power. I was then a lad of about fourteen years, and watched the machine and studied the principle involved as well as I could. It falled to work as Mr. Edge expected, and I could not then, nor do I now, understand why it would not run. It was very plausible, and it now seems to me that a machine constructed on that principle ought to run, but with Mr. Edge it was a failure. He was a very skillful and ingenious mechanic. He is still living—a very old man—and is a citizen of Athens, Ga. He, long since, came to the conclusion that perpetual motion is impossible by any mechanical contrivance. Respectfully, ble by any mechanical contribution ble by any mechanical contribution.

A Mother's Love. EDITORS CONSTITUTION: That tribute of Mr. E. H. Thornton to young Neal Keely was beautiful. It prought the tears to my eyes. What can compare with the love between mother and son! It is so maselfish, so pure, so holy, so God-like. Their unselfish, so pure, so holy, so God-like. Their very heart-strings seem to be entwined around each other, and nothing but death can part them. How many a "wandering boy" has been saved from ruin by the thought of the pain it would give his mother. Though all others forsake him, she will cling to him still. There is nothing like it in human nature. I never read in our Bible about "Mary, the mother of Jesus," without wishing that their inner home life had been more fully written out. POLICE HEADQUARTERS, ATLANTA, GA., April 27, Police Headquaeters, Atlanta, Ga., April 27, ISBI.—As assistant chief of police, I desire to return the thanks of the chief and myself to the officers and men of the police department, for their promptness and good behavior on Memorial Day, such promptness should stimulate the department to that high position, second to no organization, which any city or country should be proud of. The capitol and all the state offices therein were closed, and no business was transacted.

The captor and an obusiness was transacted during the day.

The city hall was closed, and all the municipal officers enjoyed a holiday.

The numerous banks in the city were not open to business transactions, and the doors here placards announcing that they were closed on account of a legal holiday.

The exercises of Sunday displayed all the demonstration and eclat of this sacred day, but these silent, but eloquent, tokens of respect to the departed dead, in the suspension of business in the public offices and financial institutions of the city, spoke londer than words of the sacred remembrance in which those jare held who laid down their lives for the south.

The first speaker was Mr. J. G. Camp. The first speaker was Mr. J. G. Camp. "Odd Fellowship," said he, "is a moral and piritual force. It purifies the heart and exaits the man. Its sentiments are as rich and beautiful as the flowers that bloom under the tropical sun. It is an auxiliary to the church, and brings those together the church never does. "I thank God for womanhood in Odd Fellowship. I would rather feel her love and sympathy than die a hero on a thousand fields statistics."

"Here in this live, progressive and splendid tity, I say that no order will yield more power of good than this noble institution."

Mr. Camp concluded amid great applause.
Judge James IA. Anderson followed in the laimitable style that so wins an audience.

and noble words, 'Friendship, Love and Truth,' be your guiding star."

Dr. Lee gave the concluding address.

"There is one thing about our organization which is especially good. We look on the bright side of life. In our lodges we don't see what's bad in a man; it's the reverse. And wherever and whenever we wan't to find the good and the grand there it will be.

"Our order is one which does not make a man croak and grumble. It seeks for what cheers up, what ennobles, what makes better. And then I sometimes liken it to a mutual admiration society. When the world becomes like that things will be far better.

"Odd Fellowship: Iso gets the best out of a man. It pats him o the back and dosen't go about with a long fa e, and under those circumstances the man is won over."

Dr. Lee's speech was replete with splendid sentiment and humor.

After the exercises refreshments were partaken of, and the large number present departed with pleasant thoughts of a memorable occasion.

A CHARGE OF MURDER. Bill Bowers, a Negro, on Trial For His Life.

Bill Bowers was put on trial for his life yesterday, before Judge Richard H. Clark, in the criminal branch of the superior court.

Bowers shot Henry Perry, another negro, at East Point, January 11th, last.

The grand jury found a true bill for murder. The prosecution was on the line that Bowers had repeatedly threatened Perry, and had put the pistol to his head and threatened that he would blow the whole top of his head off, while Perry protested and begged him not to snap the pistol so close to his head, as it might be loaded. Finally, the pistol went off and Perry fell dead with a bullet in his brain.

The defense, represented by Colonel T. W. Latham and Mr. James E. Warren, contended that it was all done in a good humor, and that Bowers thought the pistol was not loaded.

The prisoner's statement was on the same line.

The prisoner's statement was on the case line.

Another Murder Case.

The number of murder cases before the criminal branch of the superior court is unprecedented.

On Wednesday next the trial of Underwood for the killing of Sayre is set, making the third trial during the present term of the court, and with Ozburn the fourth criminal to be sentenced on this serious charge, unless Bowers and Underwood are acquitted.

And created a profound sensation. The resolutions, so it reported, decided the fact that Atlanta was a Christian city, and that her strict Sabbath observance was her crowning glory. It was with regret, there fore, that many Christian people of the city witnessed the diversion of the day which had just passed for the purpose of showing worldly honor to worldly memories. Armed men rid-ing gaily caparisoned horses, the music of bands, the drawing of heavy artillery wagons through the streets, drew the attention of the people way from the sacred character of the day.

The resolutions went on to regret that Sur day should have been selected, when especially all through the state the sentiment of the peo ple had led them to postpone their military parade until the day following, and to protest against the recurrence of such an event.

As two prominent members of the asso tion, Rev. Dr. J. W. Lee and Rev. T. P. Cleveland, had taken a prominent part in the memorial exercises of Sunday, the resolutions created a sharp interest and provoked a warm discussion. "I am astonished," so the report quotes the doctor, "at the introduction in this body of such resolutions. These resolutions are not only contemptible, but they are positively idiotic."

TO MEET AGAIN TODAY.

The W. and A. Commission—The Work Done by Attorneys and Stenographers.

The labors of the railroad commission ar drawing to a close.

The commission was called into existence by an act of the legislature, December 22, 1890, for the purpose of considering claims made by the Western and Atlantic railway for permanent improvements on the state's road during the twenty years of its lease.

In 1870 the lessees received from the state its road valued at, according to the estimates of their experts, $800,830,38, and in 1890 they returned it at a value of $1,528,261.05, making a difference which they claim to be due them.

returned it at a value of $1,525,251.05, making a difference which they claim to be due them of $277,520.67 on permanent improvements.

Added to this they put in a claim for taxes paid to the state of Tennessee, which will swell their claim to considerably over $800,- ooo. These are the questions which the commission is to settle and its decision is to be binding on both sides.

The court was composed of N. J. Hammond, chairman; J. C. C. Black, J. L. Warren, George A. Mercer, C. D. McCutchen, Walter B. Hill, D. G. Hughes and G. Gunby Jordan.

The attorneys for the state: Clifford Anderson, John I. Hall and W. Y. Atkinson. For the lessees: Julius L. Brown, Joseph B. Cumming and Boykin Wright. The duties incident, to a case of such magnitude, are enormous, but the hardest worked men in the court are the stenographers. The official work was given to H. L. Parry, of this city, and W. S. Richardson, of Augusta, but owing to the large amount of business which these gentlemen had on hand, they had to secure the services of Messrs. Cooledge, Nicholes, McCord and Driscol. The testimony, including that which goes into an appendix, in course of preparation, will make a book of over 600 pages in minion. Of this Mr. Driscol did nearly one-half, his share of the work being 270 pages out of the 600.

It rarely happens that so much legal talent is arrayed in a single case, and while all juries are flattered into the belief that they combine the intelligence of the community in which they live, yet it may safely be said that this jury lays over any that ever was empaneled in Fulton county.

The commission meets today at 11 o'clock, when Mr. Brown will conclude his argument, and will be followed by Judge Hall for the state, Messrs. Cumming and Anderson closing for their respective sides.

There was a meeting of the citizens of the fifth ward last night at Mile's hall.

There were present a number of property owners and leading citizens from the east side of the railroad.

The impassable condition of the streets on that side was discussed, and a committee appointed to wait upon the street committee of the council at the meeting next Thursday afternoon, for the purpose of urging the immediate necessity of making the streets and sidewalks in that portion of the city passable.

A regular organization was formed, and the Fifth Ward Club will use its influence to further every improvement in that part of the city.

The Peabody fund should really be supplementary to the state's fund. I am anxious to improve the institute in Georgia. It is a very valuable auxiliary in the training of teachers and should be conducted on a scale capable qualifying those who attend for the duties of teachers. It should not be a place of amuse-

All of the staff officers were on the ground promptly this morning.

THE LOCATION OF THE CAMP. The camp lies north of Concordia park, be tween Abercorn street on the west and the track of the belt line on the east

On the east line is an open sweep of land on which guard mounting will take place every morning at 9 o'clock. To the west of the camp runs the White Bluff road, 300 or 400 yards distant. Each of the out-oftown companies arrived on schedule time. Large crowds were in waiting at the depot, and they were enthusiastically received. Each came with well-filled ranks, assuring a most brilliant success for the first encampment of the Fifth Georgia.

The Georgia Hussars assembled at their headquarters with almost full ranks o'clock, when they left camp. They presented a fine appearance. A better looking body of men never represented any city. They were greeted with cheers on the way out to the grounds. All of the men at the camp are in excellent trim.

THE HORSES FIRST-CLASS. Their horses are of the best stock, and the officers say it would be a hard matter to get together a regiment that would equal, let alone surpass the one that gill give Camp Andersom a bright name in Georgia's military m a bright name in Georgia's military annals.

The men are delighted with the camp.
The arrangements are perfect: everything has now settled down under the strictest military dicipline, and the work of deriving, the greatest benefit possible from six days spent there has begun. Two hundred and twenty-two men are in camp, and thirty-two officers. The sight of Camp Anderson has strengthened the desire in the infantrymen to try life on the tented field of Chickamauga. The interest in the ooming encampment there is much greater than it was in the one held at Augusta, and it is believed that Savannah will be even better represented than it was last year. No one represented than it was last year. No one would be surprised to find there the military of the city 500 strong.

Atlanta will not be in it. "I always like to attend them." said Major Slaton yesterday. "This coming together of various teachers and people generally causes a rubbing together, as it were, and a benefit t rubbing together, as it were, and a benefit to all. It's always of value to listen to the ideas of others and make use of those worth while. This thing of Atlanta's being isolated will be far from doing good. We just can't attend, however. A teacher who would do so, goes at his own expense, forfeit his salary in the meanwhile, and at the same time incurs the risk of losing his position. There isn't much encouragement in such a prospect. "The main topic to be brought before the meeting at Brunswick is the unification of public school books. We would like to oppose the scheme of the state's publication of its school books. I can show that it will prove a failure. California and other states can testify

WHAT THE COURTS AND OFFICERS

Trial in the Circuit Court—The Seiz-ure—Andrew Nolan Will Plead Guilty.

In the United States circuit court the case of James H. Waites against the Richmond and Danville Railroad company was called.

The complainant asks for $15,000 damages for personal injuries received by being knocked from the track by an engine on that Waites claims that on the 19th of October, 1889, he was driving out of town with a wagon drawn by two mules. Before he started to cross the track on Houston street he stopped, and listened to hear if any trains were When he started across, but before he could get over, the team was struck by the engine, killing one of the mules, badly injuring the other and inflicting on him serious and lasting injuries.

When the court adjourned Dr. Murphy was on the stand, testifying as to the character and extent of the wounds received by the plaintiff and the results.

Revenue Agent's Office.

Colonel Chapman has just received reports of ten seizures, which he states is unusual, and that ordinarily at this time of the year the noonshiners go to work on the farm, and for awhile give the officers a rest.

Of the distilleries destroyed eight were located in Alabama, in Randolph and Claiborn counties, and two in Dawson county, Georgia. One of the distilleries in Dawson county was operated by Marion Goss, and was destroyed by Deputy Collector Darnell. The other was run by Thomas Goss and was seized by Deputy Collectors Ware and Spence.

The capacity of the distilling apparatus seized and destroyed was about 110 gallons of distilled spirits per day, or a fraud on the government of $100 each pay.

Among the stills was one large iron pot operated as a steam still and owned by Jim Crow, of Claiborn county, and one wooden still owned by Taylor & Johnson.

Several arrests were made and the men held

Andrew Nolan, the boy charged with taking from the mail some $25,000 in checks and drafts belonging to the Atlanta National bank, [will plead guilty this morning, and on account of his tender age will probably be sent to a reformatory school.

The Executive Committee Making Extensive Arrangements for the Day.

The people of Atlanta love New Holland Springs for the great benefits derived from its waters. Many and many a delicate baby and sick child have been completely restored to health by a few weeks' visit to this delightful spot. The springs are two miles beyond Gainesville, directly on the Richmond and Danville railroad, and are situated in a beautiful grove. The main spring has an outflow of about 15,000 gallons per hour, and is but a short distance from the chalybeate and sulphur springs. The sulphur is valuable for dyspepsia and rheumatism. TO CHICKAMAUGA,

There was a large party at the East Tennessee depot yesterday, at 1 o'clock, when the special train from Columbus rolled in.

There were seven coaches, engine and baggage car, and the crowd soon filled every foot of space available.

There were at least 100 ladies who boarded the train, and with those already in the cars the gentlemen made up a good 300.

Captain J. W. English, Mr. W. B. Lowe, Mr. George W. Parrott, and Mr. J. W. English, Jr., took charge of the Atlanta party.

English, Jr., took charge of the Atlanta party.

The special train was secured for the pur pose of conveying the visitors to Chickamauga, where they will enjoy a general outing.

The land sale of the Crawfish Springs Land Company will occur today and tomorrow, and this evening and tomorrow evening there will be feasting and dancing at the hotel. The Fourth artillery band, U. S. A., was secured, and went on the special train.

The sales will be made out of a 5,000-acre tract owned by the company, and will no doubt come fully up to the expectations of the leaders in this great enterprise.

THE DOCTORS.

BOTH DISCUSSED.

Difficulty?—The Dividing Line Be-tween the Two Schools.

The allopaths and the homeopaths.
Or, rather, the homeopaths and the regular physicians. Should they consult—the old school and the hew?

The recent action of the Alabama physicians by which they decided unanimously to allow that privilege, has animated still more the already wide-awake discussion. New York has long considered it, and the physicians there now stand divided.

And so nearly everywhere, forbidden by rode of ethics, the question arises: "Should there be such a hindrance?"

To many it seems but a needless discussion to allow two opposing and radically different methods to be considered together. "Let it be so," they say, "but to what pur

In connection with this several of the prom ment physicians of Atlanta were seen, and their views asked as to the correctness of the decision of the Alabama medical fraternity.

Says Dr. Bak: "Personally I have not the slightest objections. The allopaths, how-ever, are not justified in holding such a conthe time of Hahnemann's origination of the homeopathic school, humoral pathology was prevalent. That is, it was supposed that bad humors were the causes of all diseases. The allopaths at this time went to an excess in administering doses of medicine, giving an especial ingredient for each particu-

"This created a reaction. Hahneman stepped into the medical arena, and going into the other extreme, prescribed infinitesmal doses. This reason, if no other, would be sufficient to prevent the two schools ever agreeing upon any one line of treatment. Then again, the one system is based on natural science—the other not. For example, a pr tient's cheeks are flushed and throat dry. In such an instance a homeopath gives that which will produce just such a result. We prescribe a medicine with the effect exactly opposite, in order to counteract that condition.

"How can one expect ever to reconcile these teachings by a consultation?' "It is impossible," said Dr. Giddings, "for such a consultation to result to any definite purpose. The barriers existing between the two schools are too great to allow a harmonization. There is the difference in the sizes of doses prescribed—a vast difference; the physiological effects of the drugs vary, so do the therapeutical. It is all well and good to say, 'You may or may not,' but show me any two physicians, each representing firmly and strictly his own school, and you have two factors impossible to "With the homeopaths it is 'similia similibus curantur,' 'like cures like.' For instance, in a case of convulsions, strychnine would be given because it produces convulsions. We would never consent to such a treatment, and are convinced that it is no treatment at all. The agitation of the question is an ut-terly useless one. What are you going to do with the privilege when you have it?"

"I am not in favor of it," said Dr. N. O. Harris, "because I can see no good resulting from it. Let two physicians, one a regular he other a homeopath, consult. Now, either the latter must arrive at some conclusion or ather hit upon some method of treatment not considered by him previously, or blse adhere to the direction of his own school. If the latter, the consultation has done him no good; if the former, he deserts his own system, and thus is no longer a homeopath.

"As to the allopaths or regulars, their methods will never allow the adoption of any of those of their opponents. The consultation would thus be fruitless "

"Occasionally a patient wants it." said Dr. Jarnagin. "He is under the impression that such a consultation would result favorably. According to the schools, it's impossible for i to do any good. They might diagnose together to some purpose, but a physician with experience and a thorough understanding of his work, can usually do that correctly himself, and when not, why should not one of his own school suffice? As for giving permission, I am in favor, simply because the code of ethics forbids something which could not produce the purpose sought for were it set at liberty to try."

"Give me that which will do a patient most good," said Dr. Love, "It is the duty of every medical practitioner to resort to whatever treat ment will benefit his patients. The great responsibility of preserving human life rests upon his shoulders, and under these circumstances, whatever to him seems the best course should not be neglected. If a homeopath or an allopath can see any good in such a consultation, why let it be held.

'As for myself, however, while it might be beneficial for them to diagnose together, when the time for treatment came, then what? The treatment is the important work of the physician; it is that which cures a patient, and that it is which should require all the skill possible. Now, when this time arrived, the con sultation would have to cease, according to the two methods of treatment. Then where's the

Dr. R. B. Ridley was of the opinion that it was right and proper to leave with the physicians outside of any rule of ethics the propriety or impropriety of consultation.

"I would like," said he, "for the professional as well as the social relations between the regular and the homeopathic physicians to be pleasant, and I favor leaving it to the physician whether consultation is proper or not.

"I can, however, see but little to be accom plished by such a consultation, except possibly in diagnosis; beyond this nothing could be done, as the two schools are too distinct to ever agree on treatment, and to benefit the pa-tient is the ultimate aim and object of consultation. So, in reality, there can be but little reason for a consultation except to gratify the patient or his friends.

Dr. J. F. Alexander said: "I see no impro briety in such consultations, and individually would not hesitate to consult with a homeo-Pathic physician in good standing. "As to the benefit to be derived from such a consultation, in making a diagnosis there is no difference between the two schools, and where the nature of the disease is in doubt the patient or family might wish the opinion of a physician of some other school in order to ascertain the trouble, and while on the treatment they would not agree, in this mutual aid could be given. I favor consultations

Dr. Elkin favored the action taken in Alabama. He said:

"I am glad to see the movement looking to consultations between the different classes of physicians, and I believe the matter will ought before the state association at its hert meeting. The old school and the homeoathist have for some time, when called to the Same case, consulted in New York.

"The propriety of consulting with another physician should depend more on the character of the man than on the school of medicine."

"Often the object of the consultation is imply to as a riain the disease, and in this, and a hygien of ded sanitary matters, there is a clash to clash the two schools. On the reatment to be used it is not likely that the physicians would agree, and the patient or his friends would have to select the one they preferred."

Dr. J. C. Avery, when asked what his views were about the action taken by the allopathic physicians of Alabama, said:

"I do not see why a homeopath and allopath may not consult concerning the diagnosis and pathology of disease; they could hardly consult with profit as to its treatment, since the principles of treatment are diametically opposed. Yet, in some northern cities prominent men of these differing faiths have worked together harmoniously in behalf of the same patient. In consequence of such action, this question was brought up for discussion before the medical societies, and defendants of freer consultation claimed that the practice of sensible men of both schools did not differ so widely as their creeds, and the large proportion of standard allopathic text books used in Hahneman Medical college was cited. Not only were our anatomies and surgeries employed by that in-stitution, but they likewise had the good judgment to teach Pepper's system of medicine. In selecting a consultant, proficiency, and not scisms, should be the standard. If I should be called to consult with an eclectic, and he be a man of common sense and education, having graduated from some chartered have I to withhold from him the benefit of any information or advice I may be able to give, when, maybe the patient is much in need of help, just because the standard of the school from which he came, perhaps twenty years ago, is not up to my alma mater? "No school should be fenced so high or have its walls so thick but that all should have the privilege of ingress. A physician should have the unquestionable right to reject consultation with any individual; he should not be debarred the privilege of consultation under fitting circumstances with a competent man of any school. His responsibilities are too serious for him not to have the right to claim any as-

Mr. Eberhardt had been suffering with intercastal rheumatism for several days. His physician. Dr. Green, thought that he was getting along so well Saturday evening that there was no necessity in his continuing the medicine prescribed, and told Mrs. Eberhardt to give him quinine.

Mrs. Wiley is here in its behalf and doing some splendid work. Yesterday afternoon she spoke at the First Methodist church; this afternoon she will speak at Trinity, just previous to the revival services; tomorrow afternoon at Park Street church; and Thursdey afternoon at St. Paul's.

The work here is mainly in the interest of home parsonage work. The mission work includes help for the poor and needy, assisting the fallen, teaching industry and making good citizens as far as possible. In addition conferences are being aided in weak territory.

WATERWORKS TALK. MR. RICHARDS AND MR. CLAYTON

WORKING ON A REPORT. They Are Both Enthusiastic Over the New Waterworks-Mr. Clayton Talks of His Trip to Philadelphia.

Captain R. M. Clayton, the city engineer and Mr. W. G. Richards, superintendent of the Atlanta waterworks, have returned from a visit to Philadelphia, where they attended the meeting of the American Waterworks Association.

"It was a very interesting meeting," said Mr. Richards. "Whatever had been done in Mr. Richards. connection with waterworks that was likely to prove of importance was reviewed. Many papers were read by members which will doubtlessly prove of great value. "Then again we examined various exhibits and works, and visited whatever was thought to be connected with matters pertaining to the business under our consideration. Ship-building was a thing which afforded considerable pleasure, besides the instruction given. "We were royally entertained, and just be fore leaving were banqueted at At-lantic City. Every delegation will remember the meeting with gratitude for the hospitable treatment. Next year the association convenes at New York city, on the third Tuesday

"What were the subjects discussed which will prove of most value? Well, there were many. I might mention, however: "Water motors-cost of running and their conomy in connection with waterworks systems.

"Purification of water by metallic iron.
"Hydraulic elevators—objections to their use by waterworks and advantages to the public of their use, and "Waterworks securities."

Whereas, Certain prominent alliancemen, together with the chief executive of the state, have seen proper to resort to unfair, unconstitutional and undemocratic, not to say unalliance means, to bring reproach upon our brave, fearless and courageous leaders, and official organ, Therefore be it resolved: 1. That Harris County Alliance does fully endorse the national platforms, both at St. Louis and Ocala, and we hereby reassert and reaffirm our hearty support to the same.

That we do pledge our continued support to our state organ, and we do cheerfully express thus publicly our confidence in the ability and honesty of our beloved, brave and dauntless state president, the Hon, L. F. Livingston, and we do recognize in him the grandest production of the south since the agitation of the alliance movement.

4. That we deplore the fast that our county paper has seen fit, under its new mangement, to continually oppose our order, and deem it unfriendly to our cause, and therefore unworthy of the support of alliancemen, also to ask the present legislature to rescind their action, giving the governor power to pay commissioners on betterments salaries, and recommend that they be paid by the day, with expenses included.

THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

The Day on the Floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, April 27 .- The stock market today fel-NEW YORK, April 27.—The stock market today felt the influence of realizing sales even more than the last few days of last week, but the demand which has sprung up from outside sources was the great sustaining element in the speculation and enabled the list to successfully resist not only the realizations but also the efforts of the reactionists to bring about materially a lower range of values and influence of further engagements of gold for exports. The strong points in the market today were first, Villard's, Wheeling and Lake Erie's, New England and some of the specialities, but resistance to the pressure was so stubing and Lake Erie's, New England and some of the specialties, but resistance to the pressure was so stubborn in the general list that only small fractions were lost in the active shares, and considerable irregularity was shown in the final change. The result of the pressure, however, was to restrict business after the first deciline on realizing sales by the bulls. There was during the day active buying of Missouri Pacific, Louisville, New Albany and Chicago, Wheeling and Lake Erie, Wabash, Union Pacific and St. Paul. The pressure to sell was again left in the final dealing and Grangers were the weakest, as having had the greatest rise, and in some of them the losses from the best prices reached as high as 134 per cent. Villard's were the strongest points, but the reaction finally reached everything on the list. The market closed active and weak at the lowest prices, but with hopefulness for the immediate future. Hubbard, Price & Co.'s Circular.

NEWYORK, April 27—[Special.1—The day has been a comparatively quiet one on this market. Liverpool opened at an advance of from 26:3-54d and had gained another point by 10-clock: Sales of spot cotton were 10,000 bales, evidencing fome revival of trade demand, but the opening here was tame with an advance of 6 points oavely sustained, and the result was an easier closing at a slight loss in Liverpool, the reflex of which was apparent here in the disappearance of the early improvement and a day of dull-ness. Final igures were about 1 point below Saturday. The support that was conspicuously given the market last week has today been lacking, and the general feeling seems to be that any advance that may now develop will be the result of natural conditions, which is claimed are not now in favor of higher prices. Receipts at the ports are 1,000 bales, and the movement at the interior towns continues heavy. It remains to be seen now far the indicated supply is discounted by its general appreciation. The Manchester Gürardian, in its issue of today, says that the position of manufacturers is improving. Hubbard, Price & Co.'s Circular

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Features of the Speculative Movement in Grain and Provisions. CHICAGO, April 27.- The history of the wh rance at the opening, a subsequent decline and then a reaction, which left the market firm at the highest prices of the day, and $\frac{1}{2}\end{a}$ higher for July than the closing figures of Saturday. May closed $\frac{1}{2}\end{a}$ higher. Early cables, except from Paris, were weaker, but the trade here seemed satisfied with the break in prices experienced last week, and inclined toward an advance.

recent heavy advance and fine weather convinced holders that prices were too high, and, as shorts were pretty well out of the deal, the market found no support. From 63/4664c for July at the opening, the price slid off to 61/5c. Then, when wheat took a sharp upturn, there was a reaction which lifted the price to 63% at the close.

Onto was the weakest of grains. Starting at 47% (#47)% for July, stop-loss orders were encountered all way down to 44% c, from which point, in sympathy with wheat and corn, there was a rally to 46% c.
The provision market opened heavy and weak under reports of 27,000 hogs. The weakness in, the secretary about the defended to weaken holders. There was fair buying by local shorts when a moderate break occurred, and in the end there was a recovery which left prices somewhat higher than they left off Saturday.

A THRIVING VILLAGE. Meriwether's Flourishing School-Festivi-

Meriwether's Flourishing School-Festivities of the Spring.

Meriwether, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]—In all of the great state of Georgia, from mountain to seaboard, there is not a more blessed spot than this. Here is beautiful scenery, splendid soil, a magnificent school, delightfil water, bracing atmosphere, and here is culture andrefinement, the pride of its happy people. The settlement is just ten miles above Milledgeville, on the Eatonton road, and in the last year or so it has taken on a life that promises a good town in the future. The establishment of the Meriwether institute last year was the first advance step, and since that time a healthy state of progress has been witnessed. The situation is one of the finest in the state. The people throughout this section are farmers, who have become wealthy through energy and attention to business. The institute, which is in such a flourishing condition, under the tutelage of Professor McSwain, was established by them for the education of their children at home, rither than send them to colleges abroad. The experiment, in which several thousand dollars was involved, seemed at first to be agreat one, but it has proved to be the best that could have been made. The school is in a splendid condition and has as large an attendance as any school in Georgia in a town of four times te ties of the Spring. been made. The school is in a splendid condi-tion and has as large an attendance as any school in Georgia in a town of four times to size of this. Professor McSwain has several assistants, and every branch of common school education, with music, is thoroughly taught. On last Saturday the big fishing frolic here was a decided success. The young men and ladies of this section to the number of about thirty want to Humber's will are little given. ladies of this section to the number of about thirty went to Humber's mill, on Little river, and spent the day angling for perch and trout. Luck was good, and when the hour for dinner was called the party enjoyed one of the finest dinners that fishermen ever saw. What wasn't caught in the pond was carried with them, and he table, spread under the shadow of the beautiful grove, was filled to overflowing with the best products of this luxurious people.

ing with the best products of this luxurious people.

On next Friday the May festival will be the prettiest event that has been seen in this part of the state. The programme that has been prepared, was arranged by Professor McSwain, and it's chief characteristic will be in the crowning of the May queen. Miss Inex Minor has been chosen queen of the occasion, and her retinue will be made upof about fifty girls and boys from the institue. Another novel feature will be a dozen pretty misses representing some of Tennyson's masterpieces, and that of "The Brook," recited by three little girls, will be of especial beauty. Altogether, the entertainment would be a credit to a city of forty thousand people, and will infinitely surpass any rural exhibition ever seen in this section.

They Had a Jug of Whisky.

Dalton, Ga., April 27.—[Special.]—Curd Hipp was fatally shot yesterday in the north end of Murray county, hear the Whitfield line, by William Headrick and Tom Harris, in a drunken row. These, with others, had assembled in a secluded wood with a jug of whisky and cards. Hipp was shot twice through the bowels and in the arm. Headrick left the county. Harris surrendered to the sheriff.

GREAT UNEMPLOYED.

WILLY 175.000 RAILROAD MEN OFF DUTY NINETY DAYS.

pany Is Coming Out of the Woods.

The Lumber Case, Etc.

en a wholesale discharge of railroad emloyes of late. On Saturday the Western and tlantic railway cut off about 100 men of a bree of 350, and the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis division cut off 600 of a force of 1,000. The East Tennessee has been reducing force for some time, and on all southern mads a reduction of about 25 per cent in the working force is being made. Indeed, it is not confined to any section of the country; the mads everywhere are pursning the same policy, and every spring, when business begins to get dull, an army of 175,000 railroad men, or a burth of the whole 700,000, is suspended for ninety or 100 days. It is done on account of dissatisfaction with the men, but because the receipts are less, and the aim is to cut expenses in the same proportion. Never-theless it is a hardship, and causes great disatisfaction among the men, who have worked hard all the fall and winter.

As an incident to the annual cut-down, this immense unemployed force, 175,000 workingmen on parole so to speak, will go to swell the monster demonstrations which labor organizarill make all over the world in the month of

At 10 o'clock this morning an important case will come up before the railroad commis-sion. The application of the Georgia Sawmill Association for a 20 per cent reduction of rates on lumber was to have been heard some time en lamber was to have been heard some time ago, but the case was postponed by the request of the sawmill men. It comes up this morning, and both sides will be well represented by themselves and by counsel. As there has been ample time for preparation, the argument may be expected to be unusually fine. Incidentally the case will bring up for discussion one of the most important of the state resources—her pine forests—and a valuable contribution to the public information is expected.

About the biggest question the interstate commerce commission has to deal with will come up for local consideration before the Georgia commission tomorrow morning at 10 pelock. It is a case, or series of cases, brought the Georgia commission under the Georgia commission with the Ge by the Georgia commission under an act of the last legislature, which directed the comners to inquire whether there are any missioners to inquire whether there are any discriminations by railroads in interstate commerce, and upon finding such discriminations, to call the attention of railroads to the alleged violations of law. If, upon investigation and hearing of the railroad men, the cases under consideration were found to be violations of law, the railroads were to be notified to stop the discriminations, and if, after notification, the roads should fail to desist, the commissionars were to bring cases before the interstate commerce commission against the offending nerce commission against the offending mads.

These cases are brought under the clause of the interstate commerce law, which forbids milroads to charge more for a short haul than for a long haul on interstate commerce. For example, cases are made against the Western and Atlantic railroad for giving Atlanta a lower rate than Marietta on freight from Ohio river points, and against the Central railroad for giving Atlanta lower rates than Jonesboro, and Macon lower than local points the other for giving Atlanta lower rates than Jonesboro, and Macon lower than local points the other side, for freight from New York.

It is said that the interstate commerce commission never has rigidly enforced this tlause of the law, and some business men think its enforcement would distroy the commerce of the country. "For," say they, "such a course would destroy competition. If you say that those points which have competion shall not get the benefit of it, you make competition of no effect and detroy tile life of trade."

There are others who think the enforcement of the law would be the greatest social bless-

Troy the life of trade."
There are others who think the enforcement withe law would be the greatest social blessing of the century, that it would check the congestion of wealth and population in the cities and cause a redux of prosperity to flow out of the rural districts and build up the casts places.

A good deal of curiosity is aroused by the case Mr. Oswald Wilson, New York alliance broker, is attempting to make against Mr. H. H. Raymond, the general southern agent of the Mallory line, for violation of the internate commerce law. Last fall Mr. Wilson busigned tifty barrels of granulated sugar to the Georgia State Alliance exchange. When A good deal of currosity is aroused by the ase Mr. Oswald Wilson, New York alliance broker, is attempting to make against Mr. H. H. Raymond, the general southern agent of the Mallory line, for violation of the intertate commerce law. Last fall Mr. Wilson onsigned fifty barrels of granulated sugar to the Georgia State Alliance exchange. When Mr. Wilson came round Mr. Wynn asked why he consigned a cash article like sugar. Mr. Wilson replied that it was done to make a test case, as he wished to see whether the carriers were doing right. Now he has brought a case against Mr. Rayword in the United States count at Now Year.

Now he has brought a case against Mr. Raymond in the United States court at New York for violation of the interstate commerce law in discriminating in favor of certain shippers.

Mr. Raymond, when asked about the matter, remarked, "They have no evidence and there is nothing in it."

Mr. Wynn has nothing to do with the case, and knew nothing of it further than his recollection of the shipment of sugar last fall, which came to Atlanta via the Mallory steamship line from New York to Brunswick and thence by the East Tennessee railroad.

"It is a custom for the sugar refineries to prepay freight," said Mr. Wynn, "and from that I am satisfied that they get some concessions, else why should they prepay the freight? I suppose Spreckel's Philadelphia refinery ships a hundred barrels of sugar to Atlanta every day, at 49 cents a hundred, that is about $150 a day, or $45,000 a year, of freight that he aday, or $45,000 a year, of freight that he must pay for the shipments to a single city. Why should he lose the interest on so much capital if he gets no advantage from prepayment?"

There is a great deal of talk about the Augusta and Chattanooga railroad in the newspapers along the projected line. There seems to be some basis for the revival of interest in the road, if The Chattaneoga News is not misinformed.

That paper says a conference was held in Atlanta week before last between promoters of the project. This information comes from "a gentleman prominent in Georgia development and railroads," and from the connection in which he is mentioned, he is supposed to be Mr. J. D. Williamson, the builder of the Chattanooga, Rome and Columbus railroad.

The News says:

The gentleman said that representatives of Allred Sulley, Simon Borg & Co., and Lehman Bros., all of New York; Keyser & Co., of London, and other capitalists of that combination, especially those interested in the Chattanooga, Rome and Columbus railroad.

The route, right of way, topography, mineral, agricultural and other features of the road were thoroughly discussed. The representative of the road builders showed considerable interest in the road and secured all the data pertaining to it that were obtainable.

road and secured all the data pertaining to it that were obtainable.

A new feature that develops in connection with the Augusta and Chattanooga is that Millionaire John Mackey, it is stated, is interesting himself in connection with the Chattanooga and Bransville route, and the two would be built and work in harmony, making a through line, when completed, from Chicago to Port Royal, or some other southeastern deep-water port. Chicago capitalists, it is understood, have also investigated the practicability of this new through foute, and are very much impressed with it. The gentleman from whom The News secures this information is prominently connected in a business way with certain railroads, and has the confidence of railroad magnates.

Alfred Sully and his associates own the Rome railroad, extending from Rome to Kingston, on the Western and Atlantic, and have surveyed an artension to Gainesville. The Chattanooga, Rome and Columbus and the Coosa river at Rome.

In the event that the roads are built from Augusta would be tapped also by that road, and it would have rich feeders from Alabama and the west by that line, also the Chattanooga, Rome and Columbus and the Coosa river at Rome.

In the event that the roads are built from here, this city will be the center and the key for the system. At present the signs on the horizon are extended proper succession of the content of the proper succession of the proper succession of the proper succession of the center and the key for the system. The Dublin People gives an interesting rumor to the effect that the Wrightsville and Ienuille railroad, now operated by the Central, has leased the Empire and Dublin, and will run trains from Tennille to Hawkinsville.

The Empire and Dublin road is graded beroad Hawkinsville to Grovania, on the Georgia Southern and Florida. If the Central has really leaved dis road, it should put ties and the control of the in order to connect with the Perry branch at Perry. This done, they would have access to Hawkinsville and the 24,000 bales of cotton she has to ship and the large tonnage of goods she has to buy. Hawkinsville is now the head of navigation of the Cemulgee river, and is one of the best retail towns in Georgia, situated in a fine farming country and drawing trade for many mites from the country to the south. At present the town is dependent entirely upon a branch road of the East Tennessee, and the citizens have been disposed to chafe at their isolation, when new towns like Cordele are springing up within reach of their trade. With a new connection like the one indicated above, the town's former prestige would be largely restored, and a new impetus would be given to business. The spring cut-down has come, and there has Supplementary to this report was the statement that the Georgia, Carolina and Northern had renewed negotiations for the building of the Macon and Northeastern.

The reorganization of the Augusta and West Florida railroad is thus reported by The Augusta Chronicle:

The committee reported subscriptions amounting to more than the sum required for the purpose of permanent organization, under the provisions of the charter. A stockholders' meeting was then held, at which all the stockholders were present, and the following board of directors was elected:

J. P. Verdory, W. N. Mercier, F. B. Pope, Jesse Thompson, C. E. Smith, Colden Rhind and T. C. Hogue.

Thompson, C. E. Smith, Colden Rhind and T. C. Hogue.

The directors met immediately after the adjournment of the stockholders' meeting to elect permanent officers for the company.

Mr. C. E. Smith was elected president and Mr. J. P. Verdery, secretary and treasurer.

The company has a splendid board of directors, and is now in a condition to prosecute its work vigorously.

and is now in a condition to prosecute its work vigorously.

Messrs. Thompson and Smith inform The Chronicle that the road will be completed to the Central raliroad in time to bring the growing crop of cotton to Augusta.

As soon as the necessary details can be arranged, this section of the line will be let to a construction company, with a large paid-up capital, and the work of building this important road will make rapid progress.

SIMPLE TALKS ON THE EYE.

SsssssssS

"The proper study of mankind is man." If this be so, then it is not amiss to consider one of the most important parts in the make-up of a man, viz.: his eyes.

The eye is curiously and wonderfully formed, and it is the most perfect optical contrivance. It is apparently complicated, and yet it is simple it is strong, and yet in a certain way delicate. It receives the light, allows it to pass-through the aqueous humor, crystalline lens, and vitreous humor, whose function it is to properly assort and distribute the rays and throw them on the retina. Thus we have the sense of sight. The eye is called upon frequently to work two-thirds of the time, and it performs the task reliably and uncomplainingly until tired nature can hold out no longer, then the assistance of glasses is required. Glasses are used mainly by persons for presbyopia or old sight as it is called. This occurs at the age of forty and forty-five, and is easy to correct, if glasses are used in time. In young persons the ciliary muscle contracts and makes the crystalline lens more convex, but, as one grows older, the muscle becomes less able to do this work, and the crystalline lens grows harder, and it is necessary to apply convex glasses of proper strength to correct this deficiency. A few of the other defects of vision are mentioned and illustrated below.

SHOWING A PERFECT EYE.

In the above illustration it will be seen that the emmetropic or perfectly formed eye is adjusted for parallel rays of right. In such an eye the rays for parallel rays of right. In such an eye the rays enter, pass through the crystalline lens, and the other refractive media and focus exactly on the retina at the back. The impression is then conveyed to the brain through the optic nerve, and the result is perfect vision. It is frequently the case that, by reason of defective construction of the eye, the distance to the retina is too great and the rays focus before reaching the retina.

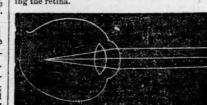

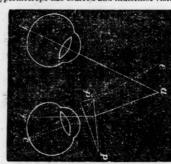

DIAGRAM OF MYOPIC EYE. This condition causes myopia, or near-sighted less, as it is generally called. The above cut show Another type of imperfect

THE HYPERMETROPIC EYE. This is the reverse of myopia, in that the dis-tance from the lens to the retina is too short. The rays do not focus on the retina, and thus the hypermetrope has blurred and indistinct vision.

DIPLOPIA.

This causes a person to see double, and is not so common as the other defects noted above. It is generally corrected by the use of lenses ground in the form of prisms. For hypermetropia convex lenses are worn, and cases of near-sightedness are reneved by concave lenses. There are many other defects that cannot be spoken of now, on account of lack of space, but we will say a few words about astigmatism, from which many persons suffer. It is caused by a want of symmetry in the cornea, and there are several varieties of the simple and compound astigmatism. It is treated by occulists and cylindrical lenses prescribed and they are furnished by the optician. Numbers of people, including children, have frequent headaches, and do not understand the cause. It is often the result of astigmatism. In civilized countries, and especially among students at colleges and universities, the percentage is constantly increasing of those who wear glasses. Their use enables the student who has weak eyes to study without disconfort or fatigue, and thus keep up with the class.

Among those who supply glasses of all kinds, student who has weak eyes to study without discomfort or fatigue, and thus keep up with the class.

Among those who supply glasses of all kinds, there is none so well known to the public as the optician A. K. Kawkes. Starting many years ago in a modest way, his reputation grew for making none but the best glasses. His business increased, hie established one of his houses in Atlantar. This being a peculiarly favorable location for him, his trade rapidly increased in volume. He then decided to concentrate his energies in building up the greatest business of this kind that has ever been carried on. His branch house at Austin, Tex., was closed and consolidated with this. He erected machinery for grinding all kinds of lenses. In accordance with his custom of doing nothing by halves, he equipped the factory with the most modern improvements in this line. The plant is operated by an electric motor of great power. While there are several other factories in the south for grinding the surface of lenses, they are all simple machines, and cannot compare in extent, perfection nor completeness with that of Mr. Hawkes. This is natural, as it requires the immense trade which he has been for years building up to enable him to place and operate this expensive machinery. Before the wheels of the factory began to revolve the offices were removed to 12 Whitchall street, and a fitting department was fixed up in the salesroom, which is said to be one of the most elegant in the United States.

Trained opticians are in attendance here and see that proper glasses are given, and that the frames are correctly adjusted. In a word it is intended that this shall be everywhere known as a house, that can supply ont of stock or make in the factory, anything in the optical line, in first-class shape.

Suburban Land Company Sale AT EAST END,

THURSDAY, APRIL 30TH.

Beginning at 11 O'clock Prompt.

The rain having cut short this sale, we will continue to offer those choice lots to the highest bidder the above date. EAST END is the most desirable and lovely location on the new dummy line from the center of Atlanta to Decatur. Being just east of, the city limits on an elegant and commanding elevation, it is certainly a very desirable spot to live on. The water is perfect, the pure bracing atmosphere as you breathe it under the shade of original trees is delightful and exhilarating. The lots are large and level. The free school building is under way and will be open for the children of East End about September 1st. The latest improvements are in the building and the very best patent school desks that are made have been ordered. One young man scarcely out of his teens bought a lot last Thursday at my sale and sold his bid on the ground for $60 profit, and took down the cold cash on the spot. We are selling cheap now, but later on prices are bound to double. Then be on hand and avail yourself of this opportunity to either get a home cheap or make money on your purchase. I know several ladies that are making more money buying and selling Atlanta real estate than their husbands ever made in the same time. The same privilege is open to all. It only requires judgment, nerve and a small amount of cold cash.

Go to the corner of Alabama and Pryor streets Thursday, April 30th, at 10 or 11 o'clock, and attend this sale. Plats at my office. Beginning at 11 O'clock Prompt.

Auction Sale, Tuesday, April 28th,

BEGINNING AT 30'CLOCK P.M.

Here is an opportunity to buy a choice residence lot for a great deal less money than you will igget them in the future. The demand for this kind of real estate grows daily. The location, just east of the city limits, overlooks all of the surrounding hills and low grounds. The electric cars run through this property every few minutes, giving prompt and rapid transit through the entire city. The water is pure, cold freestone; the neighborhood the equal of any in the south; Senator Colquitt, Colonel T. E. Walker, Judge Palmer, et al., live in the immediate neighborhood. Go out and examine the lots, see the beautiful drives and weigh the advantages, and you will conclude that right now is the time to buy. No investment has ever paid as handsome profits, as good real estate, and no person has bought a piece of first-class property in or near Atlanta, since it was Marthasville, and failed to realize big returns from its sale.

ville, and failed to realize big returns from its saile.

Home hunters now appreciate the fact that the business of Atlanta is increasing so rapidly that the noise and bustle near the center of the city create a great desire for lots on the hill tops that are just outside of the city. This is true around New York, Chicago and all the great cities.

Copenhill then is the very place to supply this demand. Then look ahead and buy while these lots are cheap, for, if you delay, you must pay more money. If you are not ready to build, secure your lot at this saie, for nothing will pay you such interest.
